Several years ago, Jane Court, Sheep Industry Officer with the Department of Primary Industries instigated a rewrite of Sheep Farming in East Gippsland, which was published in 1987 by the Gippsland Sheep Breeders Association. The result is this book: Sheep Farming for Meat and Wool.

Sheep Farming in East Gippsland was the result of a collaboration between the then Department of Agriculture and Rural Affairs, the University of Melbourne Mackinnon Project and the Gippsland Sheep Breeders Association. The contributions of Bruce Allworth, Nick Barton, Tony Brightling, Richard Churchley, Chris Ethridge, Ian Grant, Chris Halpin, Leo Hamilton, Laurie Hamlyn, Pat Hedlam, Sue Hides, Leanne Horstman, Peter Jackson, Bob Lambell, Jim Mount, Fred Morley, Mike Phillips, David Sackett, Don Shaw, Brian Shugg, Len Stephens and Tim Watts are gratefully acknowledged because the concept and structure of the renamed, revised and expanded Sheep Farming for Meat and Wool are identical to Sheep Farming in East Gippsland and parts of the original text are still relevant and have been retained.

Jane's co-editors recognise her persistence, expertise and enthusiasm for Sheep Farming for Meat and Wool. The editors also gratefully acknowledge the expertise and dedication of the contributing authors, our colleagues in the Mackinnon Project and the Department of Primary Industries.

In writing this book, we are grateful to the many dedicated scientists and producers whose accumulated experience has helped build a better understanding of sheep production systems.

The contents of this book have evolved from the research and extension projects conducted over many years by the Department of Primary Industries (and its predecessors) and the University of Melbourne.

Many thanks also to Kalinda Wade for word processing and to CSIRO Publishing, especially Ted Hamilton, for his encouragement and patience!
