

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Gordon wishes to thank Jan for her patience and support throughout the last 7 years, during which more ‘normal’ retirement behaviour has been postponed. Thank you Jan.

David wishes to thank his friends and family for putting up with all of the times he’s had to say ‘I’m sorry but I can’t, as I’m working on the croc book’. That goes double for you, Juleena.

We would both like to acknowledge all those colleagues and friends whose contributions to research projects and related experiences over the last few decades have made the book possible, particularly (in random order) Harry Messel, Lyn Beard, Peter Harlow, Laurence Taplin, Jon Wright, Grahame Webb, Bill Magnusson, Dean Stevens, Craig Franklin, Frank Seebacher, Marcos Coutinho, Tony Tucker, Winston Kay, Nancy Fitzsimmons, Jacob Gratten, Craig Moritz, Janet Taylor, Bill Green and Dan Lunney.

We are enormously grateful to Faye Bolton who read every chapter and exercised her editorial mouse, and to the following experts who read and made constructive comments on chapters or parts of chapters: David Booth, Peter Brazaitis, Chris Brochu, Pat Butler, Hamish Campbell, Mitch Eaton, Colleen Farmer, Ian Hume, Steve Johnston, Garry Lindner, Dave Lindner, Dan Lunney, Bill Magnusson, Harry Messel, Shaun New, Perran Ross, Steve Salisbury, Frank Seebacher, Roger Seymour, Matt Shirley, Laurence Taplin, Mike Thompson, Neil Todd, Anton Tucker, Grahame Webb, Rufus Wells, Saxon White and Jochen Zeil. Nevertheless, a book like this will certainly have errors and misunderstandings, for which Gordon takes full responsibility.

Adam Britton has been a regular source of advice and suggestions, and we are delighted that he will be hosting our supplementary videos on his website (see <http://crocodilian.com/books/grigg-kirshner>). He was also a generous host during our visit to ‘The Territory’ to photograph crocodiles in 2009. Adam Britton, Bill Magnusson, Roger Seymour, Laurence Taplin and Kent Vliet have been regular correspondents and Kent, Vladimir Dinets, Bill Green, Lou Guillette, Winston Kay, David Krause, Garry Lindner, Buck Salau, Steve Salisbury, Paul Sereno, Brandon Sideleau, Ruchira Somaweera, Merlijn van Weerd and Paul Weldon have been particularly generous with photographs and illustrations. Matt Shirley shared pre-publication material and he and Mitch Eaton contributed substantially to the section in Chapter 1 dealing with taxonomic revisions to African species. Alan Woodward, Grahame Webb, Harry Messel and Alistair Graham provided the data used in Fig. 1.36 and Laurence Taplin processed it. Craig Franklin and Mark Read made available unpublished satellite tracking data for Fig. 4.34. Hamish Campbell was generous with data and discussion for the chapter on crocodylian diving. Staff at the University of Queensland Library’s Document Delivery Service deserve special mention: they were not stumped once. Donald Henderson at the Royal Tyrrell Museum of Palaeontology, Alberta, collaborated in exploring (and disproving) an idea
