

Acknowledgments

This research was supported by a Smithsonian Postdoctoral Fellowship and completed at the National Museum of Natural History, Washington, DC, (USNM). The support and advice of the following curators and staff members at that institution was instrumental during the course of this project: Richard C. Froeschner, who provided humor, guidance, and access to the Drake collection; Thomas J. Henry, who shared his knowledge of Heteroptera systematics and literature; and Paul J. Spangler, who provided collections from many remote areas of South America. In addition, much of this revision is based on material collected by J. T. Polhemus and the author during research in poorly surveyed areas of Colombia, Peru, Brazil, and Bolivia sponsored by the National Geographic Society, Washington, DC, through generous support from their committee on research and exploration; this material is held for the most part in the J. T. Polhemus collection, Englewood, CO (JTPC).

A project of this size could not have been undertaken and completed without the help of numerous persons who unselfishly donated their time and expertise. Foremost among these were John T. Polhemus, of Englewood, CO, whose extensive aquatic Hemiptera collection was essential to the completion of this monograph and who critically reviewed the prepublication drafts of this manuscript, and N. Moller Andersen, Universitets Zoologisk Museum, Copenhagen, who provided advice on character interpretation and phylogenetic analysis. In addition, the following curators and institutions provided invaluable information or loans of material (institutional abbreviations are those used in the text): W. R. Dolling, The Natural History Museum, London